1993 PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURAL HANDBOOK

THE INAUGURATION OF WILLIAM JEFFERSON CLINTON AND ALBERT GORE, JR.

MARTIN PLISSNER, EXECUTIVE POLITICAL DIRECTOR

JANUARY, 1993

A NOTE FROM THE EDITOR:

Here's our 1993 Inaugural Handbook. The buzz words from the PIC (Presidential Inaugural Committee) are re-union, hope, diversity, change and casual elegance. In keeping with these themes we hope to re-unite you with a diverse, casually elegant handbook that has changed since 1988, 1984, 1980, 1976....but, like Bill Clinton, not all that radically.

This book is a guide to the Inaugural proceedings, present and past and to the new administration. We begin with a calendar of events --both official and independent---starting with the "Texas Black Tie and Boots Ball" on Saturday, January 16 and ending with the White House Open House, a tradition which started with Thomas Jefferson and ended with Warren Harding until George Bush re-instated it in 1989. (As you will note, the Inauguration of William JEFFERSON Clinton has a lot of Jeffersonian underpinnings.) Marty Plissner has written another casually eloquent Overview which is followed by a chronology of highlights of the Bush-Quayle years and the lives of Bill Clinton and Al Gore. We then looked at our new government--the proposed Clinton Cabinet, the 103rd Congress and the Supreme Court. The back of the book deals with the Inaugural events--ceremony, parade, and balls and the way these were financed.

This book was researched and written by the staff of the CBS News Election and Survey Unit. It is mainly the work of Marc Lieberman and Donna Nelson. Mary Hager and John Gallagher wrote the Clinton and Gore timelines. The Inaugural and parade histories are a compilation of the work of all the researchers who have worked on CBS Inaugural Handbooks since Bill Clinton was a gleam in Bill Blythe's eye.

We would like to thank Ned Steinberg who did the cover designs for all our handbooks this year and who decided Gold on Gold was the way to go for the grand finale. We'd also like to thank Deirdre Hester who gave us background information, John Aronsohn who provided polling data, Tom Seem and Tracy Scott who helped with information on the parade and Doree Gottlieb from VRS who's our expert on official statistics.

Here's to new beginnings, old endings, renewed elegance and lot's of change.

Your casually diverse and ever hopeful political editor,

Dotty Lynch

tbdam President Elect Bill Clinton, Vice President Elect Al Gore and their families will depart from Monticello, VA, the home of Thomas Jefferson, in a bus headed for Washington, DC. The 121 mile trip is designed to promote Clinton as a man of the people who is coming from outside the Beltway to change Washington. The bus will ride north to Culpeper where the

Clintons and Gores will attend church services at Culpeper Baptist Church. There may also be some unplanned stops.

11am Morning Church Service at Culpeper Baptist Church.

10am - 4pm AMERICA'S REUNION ON THE MALL -- This outdoor festival will include regional food, music, and crafts. It is intended to be a giant celebration of America's cultural diversity. Twenty heated tents set up on the Mall will house hundreds of regional artisans, entertainers, and chefs. The festival will be open to the public.

3pm A CALL FOR REUNION -- A concert celebrating the kickoff of inauguration week, the Call for Reunion will take place at the Lincoln Memorial. Quincy Jones will produce the event featuring such celebrities as Diana Ross, Luther Vandross, LL Cool J, Yo-Yo Ma, Oprah Winfrey, Jack Nicholson, Sidney Poitier, and Smokey Robinson. The Clintons and Gores will attend and the president-elect will make some brief remarks.

5:30pm BELLS FOR HOPE -- Following the concert, the Clintons and the Gores will lead a candlelight procession across the Memorial Bridge to Lady Bird Park at the gates of the Arlington National Cemetery. There, at approximately 6:00 pm, they will ring a replica of the Liberty Bell, originally built for the 1976 bicentennial celebration. As Clinton rings this bell, bells will be rung across the country at such official sites as Little Rock, San Francisco, Phoenix, New York, Malibu, and aboard the Space Shuttle Endeavor which will be in orbit at the time. The entire nation is invited to participate in the event which is meant to signify the reunion of the country. After the Bell Ringing, Clinton will make a few remarks and then watch a fireworks display originating from a barge in the Potomac River.

8pm ABSOLUTELY UNOFFICIAL BLUEJEANS BASH will be held at the National Building Museum. Organized by Senator David Pryor's (D-AR) son, the event will honor select members of the Clinton/Gore staff and a group of individuals who campaigned for Clinton throughout 1992. Guests are encouraged to wear jeans and must present a valid ID and Arkansas Driver's License to gain admittance. Tickets are $50 per person.

INAUGURATION OFFICIALS

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

Chairman, Presidential Inaugural Committee

Ronald H. Brown was appointed by President Elect Bill Clinton on November 18, 1992 as Chair of the PIC. Brown, who has served as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee since 1989, is the first black to lead a major American political party. He began working at the DNC in 1981, first as its Chief Counsel. He became Deputy Chair in 1982 and Chairman of the Task Force on Voting Rights and Voter Participation in 1986.

Brown served as Temporary Chairman of the 1992 Democratic National Convention. In 1988, he was Convention Manager for Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign and, during the general election, a senior political advisor to the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign. From 1979-1980, he served as the Deputy National Campaign Manager for Sen. Edward Kennedy's presidential campaign.

Brown began his career with the National Urban League in 1968. During his ten years there, he served as Deputy Executive Director, General Counsel, Vice President for Washington Operations and Chief Washington Spokesperson. Brown, who has been a partner with the DC law firm of Patton, Boggs and Blow since 1981, is Clinton's nominee for Secretary of Commerce.

General Co-Chair, Presidential Inaugural Committee

Harry Thomason was appointed General Co-Chair of the PIC by President Elect Bill Clinton on November 18, 1992. He is currently the executive producer of three CBS television comedy series: Designing Women, Evening Shade and, Hearts Afire. A longtime friend of the Clintons, Thomason met the president-elect nearly 25 years ago through his brother, Danny Thomason, then Clinton's optometrist.

Thomason's first career was teaching in the Little Rock, Arkansas public school system. He learned filmmaking by checking out books on the subject and then offering his services to an agency planning a campaign for a political candidate. His television career was launched after he produced the award-winning TV movie "A Shining Season," followed by the highly acclaimed miniseries, "The Blue and the Gray."

During the Democratic Convention, Thomason coordinated production of the stage. He was also part of Clinton's negotiating team for the presidential debates.

In 1983, Thomason married Linda Bloodworth, the other General Co-Chair of the PIC. Together, they formed Mozark Productions for the development of "quality entertainment." The Thomasons own the house in Summerland, California where the Clintons vacationed during Thanksgiving.

General Co-Chair, Presidential Inaugural Committee

Linda Bloodworth-Thomason was appointed General Co-Chair of the PIC by President Elect Clinton on November 18, 1992. She is currently the creator/writer of two of CBS' television comedy series: Designing Women and Evening Shade (interestingly, Hillary Clinton suggested the name "Evening Shade" to Bloodworth-Thomason after the town in Arkansas). Bloodworth-Thomason also serves as executive producer for the two shows with her husband, Harry Thomason. A native of Poplar Bluff, Missouri, she graduated with a B.A. in English from the University of Missouri. She then moved to Los Angeles to work for the Wall Street Journal in advertising and, later, for the Los Angeles Daily Journal as a reporter. Bloodworth-Thomason then turned to teaching, serving two years as an instructor of English Literature at a high school in Watts, California. Following her marriage to Harry Thomason in 1983, she and her husband founded Mozark Productions, a television production company.

Bloodworth-Thomason has received many awards, including numerous Emmy and Writer's Guild nominations. Her shows have also received a number of civic and cultural awards. In 1990, Ladies Home Journal named her one of America's Fifty Most Powerful Women. During the Democratic Convention, Bloodworth-Thomason produced the film "The Man From Hope," which documented Clinton's life and showed him meeting President John Kennedy.

Co-Executive Director, Presidential Inaugural Committee

Rahm Emanuel was appointed by President Elect Bill Clinton on November 18, 1992 as Co-Executive Director of the PIC. Emanuel was the National Finance Director for the Clinton campaign and the Chair of the 1992 DNC victory fund, which raised a record-breaking $71 million for the general campaign. He also coordinated the paid media strategy in several key states during the last two months of the campaign.

Prior to his work on the campaign, Emanuel worked for the Democratic Congressional Committee (DCCC) as the Director of Field Operations. In 1989, he served as Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's Finance Director during Daley's successful mayoral campaign, raising $8 million in just 4 months.

Co-Executive Director, Presidential Inaugural Committee

Mary Mel French was appointed by President Elect Bill Clinton on November 18, 1992 as Co-Executive Director of the PIC. A native of Arkansas, French served as the Director of Administration for the Clinton Presidential campaign and the Volunteer Coordinator for Clinton's 1990 gubernatorial campaign. Prior to her work on the campaign, French served as President of the Governor's Mansion Association. A board member of the Arkansas Historical Preservation Society, French holds a Real Estate Brokers license and once owned and managed a real estate firm in Little Rock.

JOINT CONGRESSIONAL INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

Traditionally, Congress allocates a sum of money to the Joint Congressional Inaugural Committee to pay for such items as the inaugural stand, platform, folding chairs, food, salaries, transportation expenses, flowers, and decorations. This year, Congress allocated $906,000 to the JCIC. The committee, chaired by Senator Wendell Ford (D) of Kentucky, is estimating that they will spend approximately $750,000 of that amount.

ARMED FORCES INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

By longstanding tradition, the Presidential Inaugural Parade is both a military and civilian event. Under charter of the Department of Defense, an Armed Forces Inaugural Committee (AFIC) is established every four years to plan, coordinate, and provide authorized support for the inauguration of the President.

The 1993 Presidential Inaugural will mark over 200 years of military participation in the inauguration of the president. Military involvement dates back to April 30, 1789 when George Washington was escorted to his swearing-in at Federal Hall in New York City by members of the fledgling US armed services.

A Media Center will be located at the Marvin Center on the campus of George Washington University, 801 21st NW, in the Continental Ball Room on the third floor. It will house a work space with approximately 200 telephones, copy machines, and a briefing room where regular briefings will take place on inaugural events and history. The briefing schedule will be released during the week of the inauguration. The Center will open Sunday, January 17 and close Thursday, January 21.

US Capitol Police, 202-224-5151

SECURITY

As one would expect, law enforcement agencies have erected an extremely extensive security system on Capitol Hill for the Inaugural Ceremony. The system is so tight that each guest will have to pass through metal detectors at one of just four entry points.

The security duties are spread among a number of agencies including the Capitol Hill Police, the Secret Service, and the District of Columbia Police Department. The entire 1,239-man Capitol Police force will be working during the Inaugural Ceremony, and many of the 4,500-man City Police will be detailed to the parade route. The Secret Service will be at all the events.

George Washington University Hospital, 202-994-1000, 901 23rd Street NW

Georgetown University Hospital, 202-687-5055, 3800 Reservoir Road NW

WEATHER

If weather conditions prevent an outdoor inaugural, the ceremony will be moved into the Capitol Rotunda. The capacity of the Rotunda is only 950, which is the approximate number of people expected on the platform. This would leave the other 249,050 other expected attendees out in the cold (literally).

Average January temperatures in Washington, D.C. are highs in the mid-40s and lows in the mid-20s, with the average chance of precipitation 30-40 percent. Washington has recently enjoyed above average temperatures, however, and National Weather Service computer models (as of 1/7/93) predict that this trend should continue through inauguration week. But, a spokesman was quick to point out, these models cannot always predict a sudden blast of cold air.

SOUVENIRS

The Inaugural Commemoratives Catalog is yours for the asking. To receive your very own copy just call 1-800-262-2222, anytime day or night. There are 15 commemoratives ranging from $20 to $75. The items include medallions, lapel pins, cuff links, jewelry boxes, neckties, frames, umbrellas, letter openers, and more. If you find yourself at 1774 L St. NW, you can stop in the Inaugural Commemorative Store and buy any or all of these items plus others that are not listed in the catalog.
